

Since 1832 Nash Point lighthouse has been keeping the mariner safe of Nash Sands, the sandbanks off the point at the entrance to the Bristol Channel. Photo: Tripadvisor

A National Message and Witness to

The Anglosphere

With our National Prophetic Record

Editor: MICHAEL A CLARK

Number 3, April 2024

---

Headlines to note:

The King, The Princess of Wales and Cancer
Is the LORD speaking to the spiritual health of the Nation?
King Charles III, a direct descendant of the House of David, is the 153rd (The Elect) in line of descent from Adam.
National transgressions bring a 'curse' (Deuteronomy 28).

The Commonwealth – a 'Company of Nations'
56 nations representing one-third of humanity.
Marks the 75th Anniversary, Westminster Abbey, 11 March, 2024.

'Don't Leave BRITAIN Defenceless'
Defence Secretary Shapps backs spending 3% of national income.
Four former Defence Secretaries and senior military officers are backing the Daily Mail's campaign for our Armed Forces, 9 March, 2024.

The Great American solar eclipse of 8 April, 2024 will pass over all seven USA towns named Nineveh.

13 days (USA number) after the Francis Scott Key Bridge collapse in Baltimore, America's busiest port (see page 13).

Further to the path of the eclipse forming a paleo-Hebrew "Aleph" over America, this, below, came in from friends in Texas. It has been checked out that the towns with the name Nineveh are all valid.

The Google Search states that 8 April, 2024, solar eclipse will PASS OVER every town in the USA with the name of Nineveh, which total seven. Number eight is in Nova Scotia, Canada. It appears the eclipse does not go directly over all of them but within their vicinities. There are no other Nineveh's in the USA, which makes this even more astounding. The path of the 8 April eclipse will cross over the towns named Nineveh in Texas, Missouri, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia and New York.

It is interesting to note that a solar eclipse known as the Bur-Sagale eclipse took place on 15 June 763 BC, passing over the Assyrian capital city of Nineveh in the middle of the reign of Jeroboam II, who ruled Israel from 786 to 746 BC. According to the Bible (II Kings 14:25), the prophet Jonah lived and prophesied in Jeroboam's reign. The biblical scholar Donald Wiseman has speculated that the eclipse took place around the time when Jonah arrived in Nineveh and urged the people to repent:

"A wicked and adulterous generation asks for a miraculous sign! But none will be given it except the sign of the prophet Jonah. For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of a huge fish, so the Son of Man will be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. The men of Nineveh will stand up at the judgment with this generation and condemn it; for they repented at the preaching of Jonah, and now one greater than Jonah is here" (Matthew 12:38–41 NIV).

THE EDITOR

Are The Jews Judah?

Pastor Charles A Jennings of Truth in History Ministries, USA, is producing a very important series on this issue which is under wide discussion in (Kingdom) British-Israel circles as a result of the current Israeli-Hamas war. It can be viewed on You Tube in two parts which are now available at:

Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SK3NIQD\_ljw

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=c\_ko3sKrQE

In 1988 a Bill was introduced by the government of the State of Israel on the question of Who is a Jew? This became necessary as a result of the turmoil being experienced on this question in the State which was then 40 years (trial) since its creation in 1948.

In Part 1, Pastor Jennings relates this history and sets out that there are six ways or classifications of being a Jew which are:

1. Full blood Judahite
2. Mixed blood Judahite/Canaanite
3. A religious proselyte to Judaism
4. Forced conversion to Judaism
5. Jewish by geographical location and religion
6. National conversion to Judaism

Truth in History magazine is available for free issue from Kingdom Treasure Ministries, P.O. Box 808, Owasso, OK 74055-0808, USA.

---

The war in the Middle East has barely begun

What we have seen in Gaza is merely an opening skirmish. The real showdown will be with Tehran

"I hate to be the harbinger of bad news, or war. But the Middle East war has not begun. Everything so far has been a prelude."

DOUGLAS MURRAY, The Spectator, 9 March, 2024.

Of course Britain is unhappy – it has been taken over by the diversity mob

The UK has become prey to a parasitic shadow culture that accuses us of bigotry simply for holding core British beliefs

“I want my country back.” When Lee Anderson MP uttered those words in his no-nonsense, Nottinghamshire miner’s style, as he announced he was defecting from the Conservative Party to Reform UK, how many of us silently concurred? We, too, would like our country back, if you don’t mind.

The feeling has been growing for quite some time. There is a sad, wistful kind of unspoken grief that our nation is being abducted by aliens who are hostile to its history and traditions, who pretty much despise everything we love about Britain and who work through any means possible (except democracy) to change and subvert it. Everything is bad about this country, or so they claim, apart from its ability to provide generous funds for their cruelly oppressed lives and rich material for their grievances.

It reminds me of those parasites scientists have discovered that hijack their host’s brain and body. Apparently, such manipulation can take several forms. For instance, suicide of the host. Well under way in the UK; the Church of England is starving parishes to death while lavishing £1 billion on slavery reparations. See also the RAF discriminating against white males, traditionally rather reliable defenders of our nation against her enemies.

Another method is decreasing the fear of predators so that the host gets eaten (the universities in bed with the Chinese who nick our intellectual property spring to mind). And then there’s making the host defend or nurture the invader (think cuckoos – you can come up with examples, I’m sure).

I realise it is considered obligatory at this point to make some “diversity is our strength” assertion. Forgive me if I don’t bother. Unity is our strength and it always has been. Back in the 1980s, when I was doing teacher training in London, the fashionable mantra was “celebrate our differences.” Even in my Leftie, dungareed, Cyclists Against the Bomb phase (so vital in bringing down the Iron Curtain), I had an inkling that wasn’t quite right. Didn’t all meaningful human connection depend on finding points of similarity with another person, not differences? But the international socialists who, even back then, dominated the academies, despised so-called “Little Englanders” and encouraged every tradition except our own. So it was that, as a young teacher, I was told to give pupils “their culture” rather than British culture which, looking back, was a fundamentally racist notion, I think. Why should 13-year-old Satwinder, born in Southall, want to hear stories about the subcontinent? (“Please, Miss, we’re English, we like ice skating,” she pleaded.) Those stories meant nothing to her and teaching them impeded integration while chipping away disastrously at a shared national identity.

This acute nostalgia that so many of us experience, an intense feeling of loss of country, is not primarily to do with race (there are millions of non-white British, some of them among our greatest patriots), although mass immigration – uncontrolled by the Conservatives who promised voters they would decrease it – has definitely taken its toll. You can’t issue 1.2 million long-term visas in a single year (2022), as the Government did so recklessly, and not expect individuals here to suffer a decline in their standard of living – access to housing, to healthcare which is already among the worst in the developed world.

Yet this truth, self-evident to anyone in Lee Anderson’s Ashfield constituency, has been strenuously downplayed by our ruling elite. It was not until last week that we heard Jeremy Hunt, the Chancellor, concede quietly in his Budget that growing our economy through mass migration might not be such a brilliant idea after all. We may have the sixth highest GDP in the world, but our “GDP per capita” finds us limping along in 21st place. If we were paying high taxes for Scandinavian-quality services, that might be bearable, but most encounters with the state, whether it be the National Death Service or public transport, are enough to induce deep despair. If there’s anyone left who doesn’t have depression already, that is.

It’s official: British people are very unhappy. A huge Mental State of the Year study revealed [in March] that the UK was the second most miserable place in the world. Somehow, we managed to be slightly more cheerful than Uzbekistan.

Why would people in South America and Africa be “thriving” when we Brits are just about “enduring”? Perhaps their populations aren’t constantly being told their history is something of which to be ashamed. Perhaps their children aren't exposed to a pernicious gender ideology at school that induces feelings of self-loathing. Perhaps thousands of previously sane young people haven't been put on "affirmative" trans pathways that maim their bodies and destroy their fertility.

Perhaps their governments, when they are elected to promote centre-Right values, haven't espoused sanctimonious, oat-milk globalism and aren't busy capitulating to every clamorous minority and Leftist instead of championing mainstream opinion. Perhaps women are still women in those happier countries, men still men, and the difference between the sexes sparks joy not allegations of being "gender critical" (or whatever nonsense term they've invented to beat us with).

Perhaps their leaders haven't let people holding views incompatible with their values into their countries, with millions of them being a burden on hard-working taxpayers who get called "bigot" if they dare to emit a squeak of disquiet. Perhaps their politicians had the foresight to build enough houses (and sewers, hospitals and nuclear power stations) to cope with the rapid demographic change that people never voted for. Or perhaps they never permitted rapid demographic change in the first place, knowing it would strain the social fabric until finally it unravelled.

You know, I have a hunch that it's totally fine in all those places more contented than the UK to be proud of your country and for that uncomplicated patriotism to be a source of nourishment when times are hard. Pulling together, social cohesion and a powerful sense of loyalty and belonging are to be prized above top-down policies of diversity, equity and inclusion. Perhaps Britons are miserable because, appallingly and uniquely, we are taught not to like ourselves, to be guilty and ashamed of who we are.

They knew that they could never steal our country from us by fair and open means, I think. So, cunningly, groups like Stonewall infiltrated institutions and corporations. Taxpayers' cash was thrown at lobbyists, even extremists, who pushed ideas that were not recognised by their government and were a dangerous affront to common sense. The NHS spends £40 million a year (enough to pay the salaries of 1,150 nurses) on woke initiatives such as calling a pregnant woman a "birthing person." Who agrees with that? Third-party providers get rich selling divisive Critical Race Theory propaganda to schools. British children are made to feel like strangers in a strange land. Weak-minded executives, who thought it would be win-win to bolster their company's woke credentials, allowed a radical, politicised minority to use them to influence the behaviour of the majority.

Honestly, it's sinister. Every week, I am sent some story by a Telegraph reader or listener to my Planet Normal podcast that reveals how this cultural coup is being achieved by stealth. Jon, who works at Tesco, was recently asked to complete an online training course on harassment in the workplace. The very first question/scenario pertained to trans co-workers. The scenario read:

"Refusing to address a trans colleague with the correct pronouns.

"Words that we use to refer to people's gender in conversation, for example, 'he' or 'she'. Some people may prefer others to refer them [sic] in gender neutral-language and use pronouns such as they/their and ze/zi."

Jon was given two options: "Likely to be harassment" or "Unlikely to be harassment." "Knowing my right to hold 'gender-critical views' (what an awful phrase!)," says Jon, "I clicked 'unlikely to be harassment' and Tesco told me that I was wrong. My intention to use pronouns that align with a colleague's sex and my own sense of reality would in fact be harassment."

In another scenario, Jon was told: "A non-binary colleague is unhappy that their supervisor is not using the pronouns they have requested. Their supervisor responds that they cannot be made to say anything that is not grammatically correct.

"Would this be considered harassment?"

"Yes – at Tesco, we treat everyone how they want to be treated, so if someone tells you their preferred pronouns we should respect that and use them ... continuously refusing to use someone's preferred pronouns is unacceptable and could be deemed as harassment.

"No – The manager is correct and no one can make someone else say something that isn't grammatically correct. Everyone has a right to say what they think and express their views."

Jon was confident that the "No" option was objectively the correct answer. "I was both astonished and not astonished to find that Tesco disagreed," he says. "The correct answer is NOT the answer which includes the sentiment: 'Everyone has a right to say what they think and express their views.' According to Tesco, to think you have the right to express your views and say what you think is an example of harassment. It is harassment if you don't immediately adopt, sincerely or insincerely, the trans person's ideology as your own." Jon tells me he could not pass the training without clicking the "Yes" box with which he disagreed. "Whoever is in charge of training at Tesco HQ actually believes that the feelings of some individuals take priority over the liberal values the West has spent centuries building."

And that, dear reader, is how they stole our tolerant, decent, beautiful, funny, united Britain. By obliging good people like Jon to agree with things that are anathema to the majority (not least supermarket shoppers) while allowing an aggressive minority to gain enormous power and intimidate the hell out of us.

So, this is how you end up with two-tier policing of the Pro-Palestine marches through London in which Met officers arrest a solitary protester waving a placard saying " Hamas is terrorism" (official Government policy) while thousands of people calling for the eradication of Israel are allowed to go on their merry, anti-Semitic way.

That's why our appeasing Home Office just committed £117 million for security at mosques and other sites to combat "anti-Muslim hate incidents" when, I think it's fair to say, most Britons strongly believe the nation has other priorities.

"I feel we are slowly giving our country away," Lee Anderson said. "We are allowing people to erase our history. We are giving up our streets to a minority of people who literally hate our way of life. We are allowing people into our country who will never integrate and adapt to British values."

The Government suspended their former deputy chairman and demanded he apologise for broadly stating (if clunkily) what the majority of its (increasingly former) voters think. Which is one reason why the Tories won't hold a single seat in the Red Wall, and will struggle everywhere else. By standing for Reform, at least Lee Anderson has a fighting chance. I wish him all the best and hope other Tory MPs will be bold enough to join him. (Why bother staying loyal to a party so disloyal to its own base?) We desperately need a Conservative Party to vote for.

ALLISON PEARSON, Telegraph Features, 13 March, 2024 (Emphasis added).

The Church leadership is destroying the C of E I love

There are two institutions: the Rev Dr Jekyll of parish volunteers and clergy, and the Rev Mr Hyde at the top

For an organization that prides itself on bringing the Good News to people, you can't move for terrible headlines about the Church of England; from the Diocese of Birmingham's hunt for a "deconstructing whiteness" officer, to the Church Commissioners' report calling for the fund of £100 million earmarked to atone for historic slavery to be increased to £1 billion.

Incidentally, the report also calls for the C of E to apologise for "seeking to destroy diverse African traditional religious belief systems" and replace them with Christianity. In a crowded field, this might be the most insulting part of all. Each year, thousands of Nigerian Christians are murdered by groups like Boko Haram for a faith that the report apparently believes wasn't worth spreading.

Some, who mistakenly view the Church of England as a unified, coherent body – may therefore delight in the shrinking congregations and generally low morale that defines it nowadays. I delight in none of these things, because I love the C of E.

Look more closely though, and you'll realise that there is not one Church of England – but two. There's the Reverend Dr Jekyll, the one who performs invaluable work on the ground; burying the dead, visiting the sick, educating more than a quarter of our nation's schoolchildren to a much higher standard than the state normally achieves.

This Church manages the food banks, playgroups, dementia cafés and loneliness workshops. It does its best to protect some of the most valuable parts of our nation's physical and cultural heritage. Its parish priests do this for little money; its thousands of volunteers do it for none at all.

Then there is the other Church of England – the Reverend Mr Hyde. This is a church of unaccountable committees and upward failure, resulting in perhaps the least impressive bench of bishops since Pope Gregory first observed "non angli, sed angeli". Members of this caste speak in identikit managerial jargon, which from an institution that has provided some of the most beautiful cadences and turns of phrase in the English language is depressing.

Even more depressing is the fact that nothing they say or do gives the impression they are running a church at all, rather than an NHS trust or local council. The former Post Office CEO Paula Vennells (who, lest we forget, was reported to have been Justin Welby's choice for bishop of London) embodies this second Church: an individual with no obvious link to its parishes or grassroots work yet catapulted into its upper echelons.

She symbolises a wider, more striking issue: Mr Hyde's contempt for the ordinary people in the pew. In Galatians, St Paul talks about "false brethren" who posed as members of the church in order to bring it "into bondage." I always wondered who he meant. Wonder no more.

It is increasingly clear that these two churches cannot both survive; that this second Church of England, which controls all of its money, runs its internal organisations, manages (read: stitches up) appointments, is doing its utmost to destroy the other one. This has been going on for some time; in the 1970s, under the banner of "fairness," the Church stripped parishes of their assets and centralised their funding. It was claimed that this would result in a "more equal" church for the nation.

Instead, dioceses invariably use these sums to fund more diocesan officials and vanity projects, all at the expense of the parishes that provided them. Meanwhile, your average church scrabbles around in a desperate attempt to keep the roof up and the lights on.

The institution owes its existence to the unpaid, unappreciated labour of parochial church council members, church wardens and congregants. Many buildings wouldn't survive at all without charities such as Friends of Friendless Churches, which supports more than 60 abandoned places of worship across England and Wales.

In the face of this, Church of England PLC is invariably stingy; its long-running refrain to parishes up and down the country is "if you want a vicar, you've got to pay for it yourself" – which naturally favours wealthier areas over poorer ones. Which is why developments like the search for a "deconstructing whiteness" officer to join an 11-person West Midlands "Racial Justice" team are particularly grating. Not only does this directly contradict Christian teaching that we are children of God, made in His image – there is the sheer cost of it.

Having claimed poverty, suddenly the C of E is awash with cash for nonsense-jobs. Nor will finding £100million down the back of the ecclesiastical sofa to devote to “reparatory justice” endear the C of E to its hard-pressed congregations. Some no doubt imagine that embracing radical thinking will attract younger worshippers; the Bishop of Dudley recently boasted to the General Synod that every parish representative in his diocese must now undergo compulsory “unconscious bias” training.

More likely it will irritate the dwindling number of volunteers who sustain the Church, and further demoralise clergy who depart from this way of thinking. But this is par for the course; so much of the hierarchy’s language and decision-making seems designed to alienate. Robert Conquest famously noted that the “simplest way to explain the behaviour of any bureaucratic organisation is to assume that it is controlled by a cabal of its enemies.” Nowhere is this truer than in the Church of England.***

MADLINE GRANT, Telegraph, 6 March, 2024 (Emphasis added).

* Interestingly in 2024 we are 1290 (desolation) plus 70 (‘Jerusalem’) years from the Synod of Whitby of AD 664; 70 being marked as determination for the City of God.

---

Events Update

["And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer" (Isaiah 65:24)].

“Nuclear fusion for the grid is coming much sooner than you think

Britain is on the brink of striking gold in the race for limitless energy”

“Commercial nuclear fusion has gone from science fiction to science fact in less than a decade. Even well-informed members of the West’s political class are mostly unaware of the quantum leap in superconductors, lasers, and advanced materials suddenly changing the economics of fusion power ...

“It is time to drop the old joke that fusion is 30 years away, and always will be. A poll at the International Atomic Energy Agency’s forum in London found that 65pc of insiders think fusion will generate electricity for the grid at viable cost by 2035, and 90pc by 2040 ...”

AMBROSE EVANS-PRITCHARD, Telegraph, Business, 13 March, 2024.

Postscript Alert

TOWER OF BASEL

by ADAM LEBOR

The shadow history of the secret bank that runs the world.

Published 3 June 2014, 360 pp, Softcover illustrated.

Available from: Amazon Books UK, £11.45.

(Hardcover published 2013 by Public Affairs, USA).

The first informal meeting of the Board of Directors of the Bank for International Settlements in April, 1930. These gatherings were so secretive that the room remained closed to outsiders even after the central bankers had departed (Courtesy BIS).

The first informal meeting of the Board of Directors of the Bank for International Settlements in April 1930; 94 years ago, or 120 x 286.1 days (warning of displacement) expire April 2024.

THE EDITOR

ALERT: Risks Rising in USA Debt Market.

Foreign investors may soon refuse to buy USA debt.

At the end of Fiscal Year 2024 the total government debt in the USA, including federal, state, and local, is expected to approach $39.00 trillion (390 = Ten Tribes trouble).

Larry Fink ('king of Wall Street') warns of 'snowballing' USA government debt.

Westminster Government Defines Extremism.

Full list to be published within weeks.***

Muslim and far-right organizations could face ban.

MICHAEL GOVE, House of Commons, 14 March, 2024.

*56 years (perfect Lunar Cycle) from Enoch Powell's speech 20 April, 1968.

The New Cold War?

Government calls out China and Russia over massive cyber attacks to destabilise our society. Beijing hacked details of 40 million British voters directed at politicians and institutions.

OLIVER DOWDEN, House of Commons, 25 March, 2024.

Russia Attacks Shapps' RAF Jet by Jamming GPS.

Outrage as Defence Secretary's plane suffers 30-minute blackout.

Russian electronic warfare units jammed the GPS system on the Defence Secretary's RAF Dassault (Envoy) plane on 13 March as he returned from visiting Nato soldiers in Poland.

"They would never dare launch such an attack on Air Force One."

EDWARD LUCAS, Daily Mail, 15 March 2024.

Failed State situation approaching in Haiti!

Yet another country added to the list of states dominated by brutal dictatorships and gang violence where civilization is broken and false religion of voodoo reigns. Once again the people turn to the West – the covenant nations – for help in their desperate need.

---

Your interest and valued support is invited as we develop this new venture.

Donations to: Barclays, sort code: 20-07-82.

Account name: The Kingdom Foundation.

Account number: 00254037.

---

The Anglosphere

Email: michael153clark@hotmail.com